

Congratulations to
Ardem Patapoutian, PhD

Co-winner of the 2021 Nobel Prize in Medicine!

Dr. Ardem Patapoutian was jointly awarded the prize with David Julius PhD, for their groundbreaking discovery of the receptors that enable the body to sense temperature and touch. This discovery has tremendous implications for the treatment of chronic pain and other conditions.

As he announced the winners, the secretary-general of the Nobel Assembly stated this discovery "unlocks the secrets of nature. It's actually something that is crucial for our survival, so it's a very important and profound discovery."

The AAMS congratulates Dr. Patapoutian on his remarkable achievements and this much-deserved honor.
